Did you know?

Lumley has marked similarities to other northern castles of the same era, for instance to Bolton and Sheriff Hutton.

The Baron's kitchen was over 2 stories 'the Great Kitchen'

A laburnum tree in the courtyard was planted by Queen Elizabeth the late Queen Mother

The dungeons were in where the inner well is now, and there used to be a grate in the floor in the inner courtyard where prisoners could look up into the outside world and dream of being free....

There are tunnels running from the cellar to the Chester le Street church where prisoners used to be transported down and was used as an escape route should the castle be under siege!

Lumley Castle was built in the late 14th century by Sir Ralph Lumley, a soldier and nobleman who rose to prominence during the reign of Richard II.
